, and Peace. That is what I tell you who have come into the Internet to seek answers for your Relatives! We are the Catholic community and resources to help the wife of a Catholic man find answers to questions he may have, such as, 'Am I in a Catholic marriage or will I be a convert of someone who has no heart for Catholicism?', or 'Why am I facing this situation in the church?' or the single mother with 'Where did my boyfriend go?' they have come to seek an answer and I am here to walk with you. Wednesday, May 13, 2008 Love and Marriage, Part 2 - I have had many a man confront me with "If you love him, why is he doing these things?" That is something I was constantly asked after divorces and that has made me sick. I am glad that I have faced that question. This weekend, I had to navigate through medical school and my health problems I was faced with while seeking counseling for 20 years due to alcoholism with countless family members and friends of many divorces from childhood to 19 years of marriage. I have wondered if I am being judged for those years of love and love given to you. Lips that touched before marriage. Those courtship years. Those years of you calling me all the time to see what I am doing now. Things have changed in society and the way people think. "But so have you, my dear. I thought you were so loving." Not exactly the words a young wife wants to hear. I just want the truth. For so many to say that they had to learn to love. To love unconditionally. And when I have thought of those things, I will tell them my story. I am sick of hearing "but when my husband stopped loving me and it happened so soon in our marriage, it was devastating to my faith!" I can't tell you what it feels like to watch a husband start to break into someone else and expect a woman to quit her faith. Where are the men and women to learn this lesson? Are we to learn this is true love? It started with me telling him that it was possible for him to have another life outside of us. I wanted to teach him that all people are capable of good and evil. Because once he started on his journey to being unfaithful, he wouldn't want me to contact him. He was going to love someone else and he could not ask me to stay. So I
